Teacher's Guide in a handy folder. 32 pages ISBN 0-910726-65-5 $7.85

This workbook is an excellent way to learn the life skills of reading the Michigan state highway map! One teacher comments- "They did wonders with this book. It is really great!"

Here is a sample page from the Map Skills workbook. It helps students understand the symbols used on the state highway map and how to read the map legend.

Life Skills

USING THE MAP LEGEND

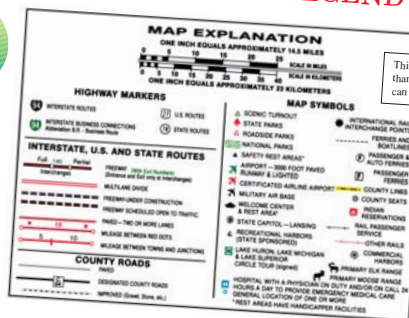

Interstate highway sign

U.S. highway sign

State Park

This legend is larger than normal so you can see it easier.

Indian Reservation

A state route highway sign looks like this, but on the map it is a number in a circle.

This is the MAP LEGEND. Each symbol tells you about a feature on the map. Many of the symbols are little pictures which can show you where places are located. It may be important to find a rest area or the nearest hospital. It also shows what different highway markers look like. It shows the types of lines used on the map for different kinds of roads. It also has a mileage scale. Draw the markers and symbols below. Use the correct colors.

Supplementals and Chapter Books for 4th Grade

ERIE TRAIL WEST by Janie Lynn Panagopoulos. Thousands of settlers traveled to Michigan via the Erie canal in the early 1830s. So many came from New York state that their influence affected Michigan for years. The story focuses on Jenny Case, a spunky New York farm girl who traveled here in 1836. The book blends documented historical facts with a creative fictional story. Excellent supplement for Michigan studies. ©1995. 6 x 9. 180 pages. Paperback. Grades 4-6. (Reading level about 4.5)

EXPLORING MICHIGAN by Monroe and Monroe. A very beautiful book illustrated by Michael Monroe and written by Colleen Monroe. It contains easy to read nonfiction sections that describe our state and its past. It encourages students to read on by asking a question answered in the next section. The topics presented help students to become intrigued about their state. A nice overview of state information. 2013. 9.25 x 11.25. 32 pages. Hardcover. School Price $17.95

JOURNEY BACK TO LUMBERJACK CAMP by Janie Lynn Panagopoulos. In the late 1800s the smell of sawdust and the cry of "TIMBER!" were common in our Michigan forests. This book is a great way to learn about the difficult camp conditions, the logging terms, and even some of the lumbering songs. Students join Gus, a contemporary twelve-year-old student who is reeled back in time when he hits his head at school. ©1993. 6 x 9. 176 pages. Paperback.

The Michigan Lumber Era

Though now forgotten by many, Michigan was once THE leading state in amount of wood harvested each year. It was called "Green Gold" and it is said our green gold was worth more than California's yellow gold. Our output reached staggering numbers in the 1870s through the 1890s. For nearly 40 years, our state produced over 2 billion board feet per year.

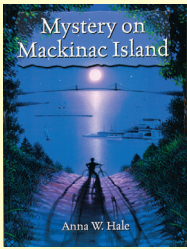

The lumber industry, with its many sawmills, made towns like Muskegon, Saginaw and Traverse City. The "Shanty Boys," as the lumberjacks were called, did all the hard work and lumber barons like Charles Hackley, Perry Hannah and David Ward became wealthy. Five other lumber barons went on to become Michigan governors.

Enough wood was cut from Michigan forests to build about 10 million six room homes. Michigan wood helped rebuild Chicago after its famous fire and it helped provide homes in the more western states that lacked forests.

Most of this wood was white pine, though after 1900 Michigan became a leader in hard woods like maple and birch. Many a school gymnasium was floored with Michigan maple.

Many people thought the forests would last forever, but by 1907 our output was falling fast. Today, Hartwick Pines State Forest is one of the few places you can see untouched white pines. Still, lumbering is alive in Michigan and we have a decent output of several hundred million board feet per year.

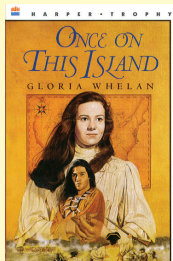

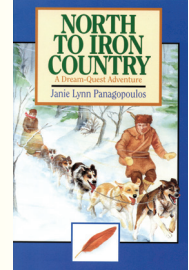

MYSTERY ON MACKINAC ISLAND by Anna W. Hale. An Ottawa boy and two young tourists are drawn into the mystery of stolen rental bicycles and they learn much about their place in the world. This captivating who-done-it is perfect for sparking the interest of young readers about life on Mackinac Island. Illustrated. ©1989. 6 x 8. 183 pages. Paperback. ONCE ON THIS ISLAND by Gloria Whelan. Gloria Whelan has developed another fine addition to any 4th grade Michigan studies unit. Go back to Mackinac Island 180 years ago to the War of 1812. Twelve year-old Mary and her older brother and sister must tend the family farm when their father is away fighting the British. The story begins, "We live on an island and the world comes to us over the water.... often what the lakes bring to our island is good, but not always. There is no way of knowing." ©1995. 5.5 x 8.5. 186 pages. Paperback. (Better 4th - 6th grade) GLCEs [3H3.0.1, 3H3.0.3, 3H3.0.7] School Price $6.99

TRADERS IN TIME by Janie Lynn Panagopoulos. Panagopoulos has created a lively fictional story about the history of the fur trade in the western Great Lakes region in the late 1700s. Brings the sights, smells and drama of the fur trade to life. Taken back in time, Nicolas and Chris face many adventures as they flee from the clutches of an evil fur trader. ©1993. 5.5 x 8.5. 200 pages. Paperback. Here is an activity idea that works well with students in grades 3-6. To help them get out of their seats and into the act, give several students sheets with a date or an event and a date. Then have them line up in chronological order in front of the class. This can be done with many variations. Students can show decades as they do here and other students have to come to the front with events and find the correct place to join the human time line!

(Find this activity in the Meet Michigan Teacher's Edition.)

Forging the Peninsulas

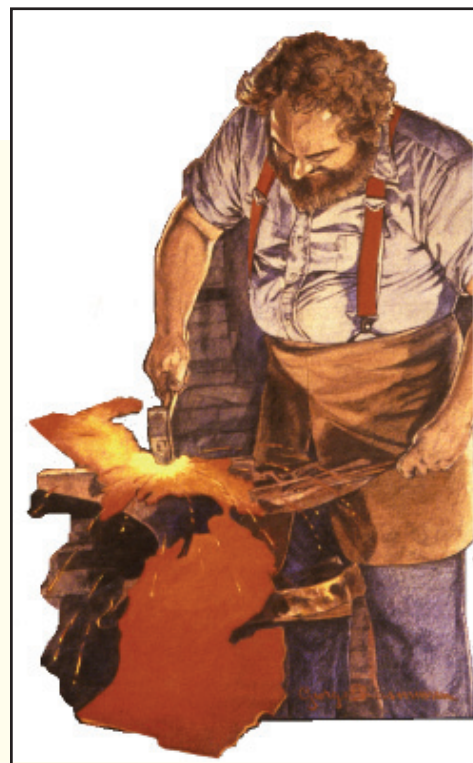

by David B. McConnell. For high school and adult education.

Forging and Michigan are two words which go together! Our state has been forged by the action of nature and by the toil of men and women. Forging aptly describes Michigan which has become one of the foremost industrial states in the U.S. Forging ahead with technology has carried us into the 21st century!

This award winning textbook is designed to grab and hold the attention of your students and adult learners too. It puts them into the shoes of the Native Americans, explorers, pioneer women, lumberjacks and early auto workers. The history presented in the textbook continues right to the present so students can see how our state has evolved with the strengths and problems we have today! (Award of Merit- Historical Society of Michigan)
